A Lettuh from da Edituh: The Manifesto

It is now the one year anniversary of The Lame Monkey and we hope you have enjoyed us thus far. Below is reprinted our statement of purpose from issue #1. I feel it still holds true. You be the judge. Thanks to all—readers, advertisers and, most importantly, helpers—Eds.

A Manifesto is a published statement of purpose. It's true that the Lame Monkey Manifesto fits this description vaguely at best. Below we have published our reasons for existence and we shall repeat them, at the most, from time to time. However, the title of the this paper shall retain it's Manifesto simply because it is far more colorful than Times, Journal, or certainly Beacon, and also because the publishers (us) happen to like it. So there!

If we must justify the rest of the title, let us first state that this paper was named as so many publications, businesses and babies are these days. That is by the looking through a dictionary and a thesaurus simultaneously and pulling out exotic terms for mundane things.

If we must still proceed we may say that hidden beneath the seemingly silly name, The Lame Monkey Manifesto, is a definite underlying profundity. Let us explain.

The monkey is a symbol for the overriding tone which the paper embodies. It is at once curious, intelligent, and humorous, just as we strive to make the material in the The Lame Monkey. "Curious" in that it is question raising and muck-raking, "intelligent" in that it is informed and educated, and "humorous" in that it is not only funny and entertaining, but also bears the indirect weapon of satire, which helps to make up for the disadvantages of being Lame.

Yes, the Monkey is lame in that there are certain constraints placed upon it that arise from the fact that many of the things that the paper is trying to do are frowned upon by greater authorities, such as the UT™ Overlords and Student Apathy, our two deadliest poisons. Thus the Monkey is not capable of directly confronting it's adversaries and is therefore lame in a sense.

The name of the paper properly explained, we continue with our statement of purpose:

A Statement of Purpose

1. Our first and foremost purpose is to provide a source of entertainment. Our initial conception was that of a students dream—an extended funnies page engulfing an entire paper. We are going to maintain a light tone with the paper, selecting the best humor writing submitted, including comics and cartoons, and sticking in anything else that we can get our hands on that is generally off-the-wall, and still relatively legal.

2. Secondly, we are providing a student forum. We hope that the pages of this paper will become a ring wherein various campus factions will collide in many a blood-drawing literary battle. We will do our best to pit liberal against conservative, student against faculty, engineer against artist, religious organization against religious organization, and malcontent against the UT™ administration. We will "invite all responsible conflicting comments."

3. Thirdly, we are providing an alternative source of campus related information. We intend to provide the results of a student evaluations of instructors each quarter. Also, here you may read about all of those obscure things that are happening on campus that you are probably interested in but can't find out anything about (provided someone submits something about them).

4. Another purpose of this paper is to abolish student apathy. We believe that a university is a place for more than books and stuffy profs. College students should be involved in a wide variety of activities. We would like to see things happening at UT besides church ice-cream speers and inter-dorm bowling leagues, and we are going to do what little we can to stir things up around here.

5. Lastly, we hope that The Lame Monkey will provide a lever for the seemingly powerless UT student body. We place in the hands of the UT students what forces publishing may offer that perhaps they may see to it that changes are made in their University and environment to better suit them.

(If you would like to contribute material of any type, call or write. Numbers in credit box on this page.)

Enjoy. (January 1987)

Lettuhs to da Edituh

DEAR PROPHET

Prophet:

Sorry to beat on a dead horse. I read your letter, recalled Doug Collin's article [See LM 1-5], got steamed and wrote this, then saw Doug had pretty well addressed this issue in this/thats issue. I can't let a good rant go to waste, though.

Look, I've about had it altogether with new age Christianity. Yammer, yammer, yammer, God, God, God. I think I've something of an idea about how you regard your God and your relationship with Him, as I've spent a lot of time chatting with Christian folk as devout and dedicated as your letter indicates you to be. Well, what of it? Those are my credentials as an Unbeliever, that's all, as someone who wants nothing to do with Him (yes, I capitalize, for that's the grammatically done thing), but who has at least looked at what His folk offer. My biggest beef, my butt steak, so to speak, with King Hoo-Hoo up there inna big sky, is one of the things you like about Him, and it's that which you so "oh-the-error-of-his-ways"-ly pointed out to Doug: God gave us the choice between good and evil. I'll say it again: God lets us choose for our very own selves whether we do good or whether we do evil. We can, with but a simple opening of our hearts, acknowledge Jesus Christ as our savior, and He will enter into us that we may be saved. It's not an easy thing to do, nor is it easy to follow in Christ's footsteps; however, with the grace that He grants us in accepting Him, we can live a Godly life. But it's our choice, see, He doesn't force us to love Him. The vindictive shit. He might as well have forced us. How in this world or out of it can anyone accept a one or zero proposition like that? Love me or rot in hell forever and a day? He'll feel sorry for those of us consumed by never-consuming fire, but, after all, he gave us a chance. I feel no gratitude to Him for giving me this wonderful freedom of choosing between two things, as if good and evil, on and off, yes and no, were all there is to life/afterlife. Do you still beat your wife? Yes or No? America, love it or leave it. Death to all fanatics! There are absolutely no absolutes. You can't add apples and oranges. Does a dog have a Buddha nature? How do you feel about a professor who grades you on the based on his/her granting you a choice between sleeping with him/her or failing the class? I don't go for propositions that are all-or-nothing, and certainly not the carrot-on-the-end-of-a-stick-with-a-whip-behind proposition. And there's no way in Hell, and, yes, I do mean that literally, that I'll respect anyone who forces me to make that choice, who presents such a choice as though it were given me for my benefit. As Patti Smith so stunningly put it, "Jesus dies for somebody's sins, but not mine."

DEAR JIT

Dear Jit,

I know that my nomination for "Jit's Next Victim" is the only logical choice... Sean Miller (otherwise known as the "Rugby Player from Hell").

It may piss him off, but hey, if he asks any questions—send them to me (I'll keep him in line)!

Thank you for your support,
Elizabeth

P.S. While you are victimizing Sean, please destroy his red Mazda RX7 as well.

FACTSHEET FIVE

[The following is a reprint of the review TLM recently received in Factsheet Five (#24), the national underground publication directory.]

The Lame Monkey Manifesto Vol.1 #5 ($1 from PO Box 8763, Knoxville, TN 37996-4800): It's a relief to see a college tabloid that's supported neither by the administration or Joe Coors. Yes, this is an underground paper, and though they do publish some miscellaneous humor and stories, they also publish the sort of things that make undergrounds great: things like unofficial class evaluations and ideas of screwing up the parking ticket system. This could almost make going to the U of Tennessee bearable.

UPSET

Why don't you take your goddamn paper and shove it up your ass. No one want to read your commie ramblings anyway. Why don't all of you get jobs and do something constructive instead of printing this kind of shit.

Logic, Logic, Who's Got the Logic: Jesus Was a Commie and Darwin Wasn't Talking About Hulk Hogan

Doug Collins
Lame Monkey Philosophy Reporter

Well now, well now, it seems we've upset some people. "God, That Good Natured Ole Tyrant" has made some people react—not think, mind you, but react. Let's analyze those reactions for a minute. One writer, a very (parenthetical) and (dogmatic) person who signs himself "The Prophet" has attempted to answer our little riddle. Proph, babe, before you call these questions shallow and redundant, you should do a little research. Saint Augustine and Saint Thomas Aquinas had difficulty with this one and even they lost sight of the problem, getting caught in the same morass of scripture in which you found yourself stuck. It is impossible, within the structures of logic, to reconcile an omnipotent, omniscient, omnibenevolent deity with the existence of evil. Once again, I'll point out the fallacy of the free will argument.

First of all, free will is itself inconsistent with omniscience and omnipotence. If God knows everything, then he knows what I am about to do and has known since he said "fiat lux" (God spoke Latin, y'know). Therefore, he knows if I will choose good or evil. If God is omnipotent, then he can cause me to choose good or evil and, in fact, has done so. Lose me on that one? Well, if I can do anything, and I choose not to act, isn't that the same thing as acting? Haven't I, knowing the results of inaction, by not acting chosen to those results? In other words, can God pass the buck? Throw in omnibenevolence and you see that God cannot, by the nature of omnibenevolence choose evil, or allow evil to be chosen! If he does, then it is not through inability to reconcile free will and an absence of evil, for God is able to do anything. And there ladies and gents, is where you lost sight of the little pea in my previous shell game article.

If God can do anything, then He can reconcile paradox. The logically impossible is not even difficult: pi can equal three, cocks will crow at moonrise and magic is loose in the world. God can be omnipotent, omnibenevolent and support Alabama if He so chooses because He has the power. I can't understand it, but then I can't understand nested infinities or 4th dimensional curves either. How can He do it? Ask him, not I.

So what do we do now? Well, we abandon logic and enter the realm of faith. I have faith that God does not exist; I can't prove it, because if He does exist then all my logical relationships are merely a fraction of His being. You can believe what you want to. I am disappointed that no one caught the gimmick in my first article. Oh well, you were probably too horrified by the prospect of a Godless universe. Speaking of which, shall we discuss Lonnie Raper's pathological dependence on God the Father for his moral and ethical standards? Gently now, we don't want to frighten him.

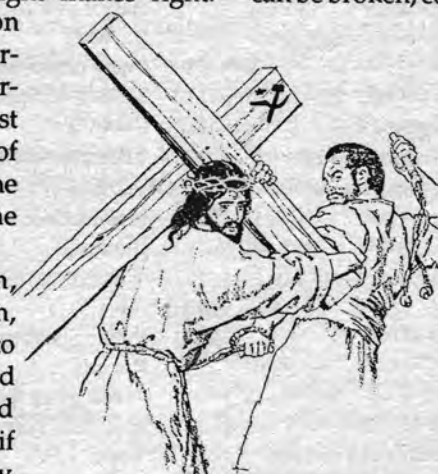

Lonnie, sweetie, "atheists" was the correct term. "Secular humanist" is a Neo Dexter buzz word for anyone who refuses to march in step. "Godless communists" goes to far since communism is a politico-economic system. A system advocated by Jesus, by the way, at least as far as economics is concerned. Jesus was not a capitalist.

Now let's turn to the argument itself. I was willing to go along with you until you equated "survival of the fittest" with "might makes right." This is a common perversion of Darwin, wherein survival of the fittest become survival of the strongest. The two are not the same.

Hulk Hogan, the man, the myth, the legend, able to eat steel bars and shit nails, would pop like a balloon if shoved suddenly into even a relatively soft vacuum, yet there small, weak and timid bacteria which cope at ease. Why? Because the bacteria are more fit to survive that environment. Just so with ethical systems.

If a system based on rights and a concern for justice is more popular than a dog-eat-dog anarchy, then it is probably more fit to survive the social environment. Like the old story about the bundle of sticks, one stick by itself can be broken; combine the sticks and they are stronger. Actually, I think that this is both self-evident and an endorsement of compassionate societies. If you believe that a socially responsible society is so unfit that it must be propped up by God, all you are saying is that since God is strongest, let His will prevail. That is truly might making right. You seem unable to accept that the universe may a cold and lonely place, but just because you don't like it, don't mean it ain't so. Wrap yourself in illusions, Lonnie, but don't pawn them off as reality. Some of us don't need God to keep us warm at night.

Just Another Godless Communist?

I saw Jesus go by the doorway of my lecture hall this morning. He paused momentarily as if to explain: "Sorry, can't stay, I'm late for My religious studies class." He was wearing a tie-dyed Grateful Dead shirt And carrying an art pad and some Middle Eastern Civilization textbooks. I wanted to go running after him and ask him For his phone number just in case I ever got in trouble— Then I smiled And realized how foolish that would be.

The Winter Weather Worrywart Checklist

Lauralie Morton
Lame Monkey Weather Correspondent

Well, it seems that we are presently the victims of an excessively precipitant winter season, and it is apparent that we have some amateur worrywarts out there in the nooks and crannies of readerland. Having had the unmitigated delight of living out twenty-three winters in this burgeoning metropolis, I consider myself an expert in the field of professional weather-worry. If you follow the directions exactly as presented here, I can assure you a successful survival of the terror this winter might bring.

1. If adverse conditions are predicted, immediately rush out to the nearest grocery store and stock up on staples and non-perishables. The cruel terrain of East Tennessee coupled with ice-covered roads could strand you for weeks on end. How horrible to starve to death in your own home just because you ignored your scout promise to be prepared. Tomato soup, grilled cheese sandwich fixings and four kegs of beer are essential to a basic survival kit.

2. Do not drive at all, from November 1st through April 15th. If you must drive, be sure to pump your brakes when going up hills. My sister's husband's cousin's doctor once told me that this gives good traction. For God's sake, slam on the brakes if you start to slide on snow or ice. This will, at least, ensure your departure from this world in a genuine blaze of glory.

3. Be a good weather-watcher. Know the difference between the jet stream and the blood stream. Monitor temperature fluctuations at fifteen minute intervals. That harmless little raincloud out there could easily metamorphose into a full-blown blizzard, just because the temp drops a degree or two. And just imagine your shame at being caught in the unawares, when all you had to do was call the local times and temperature number four times an hour.

4. If you are at work or school when you spot that first flake, leave immediately. It is helpful to clog Kingston Pike, Cumberland Avenue, and the interstate system with thousands of frightened commuters all at once. The glut of traffic keeps the precipitation, be it snow or ice, from ever reaching the street's surface.

5. Feel free to sled and frolic on your neighborhood streets. This will keep you from getting out in your car and sliding over any small children who might be sledding on your neighborhood streets. You probably won't get hurt.

Now that we've established a few precautions, let's discuss how to best enjoy this weather. Here are a few suggestions to cure that cabin fever:

1. Watch MTV until your eyes glaze over. The minute-by-minute intellectual challenges of music videos will provide you with hours of thrills and chills.

2. Do not read anything. This is imperative. You already have to do enough reading as it is, so don't let this pollutant leak into your recreational space.

3. Urinate your name in a snowbank. (This is especially entertaining for females.)

4. Indulge yourself in otherwise decadent luxury. Take a bubble bath for two days, or until the snow melts— whichever comes first. Stuff yourself on chocolate raisins and listen to Windham Hill until you become comatose.

5. Teach yourself to armpit-fart "Let It Snow". Lust after Vanna White and Pat Sajak while giving yourself a pedicure. Fake a British accent while ordering a pizza.

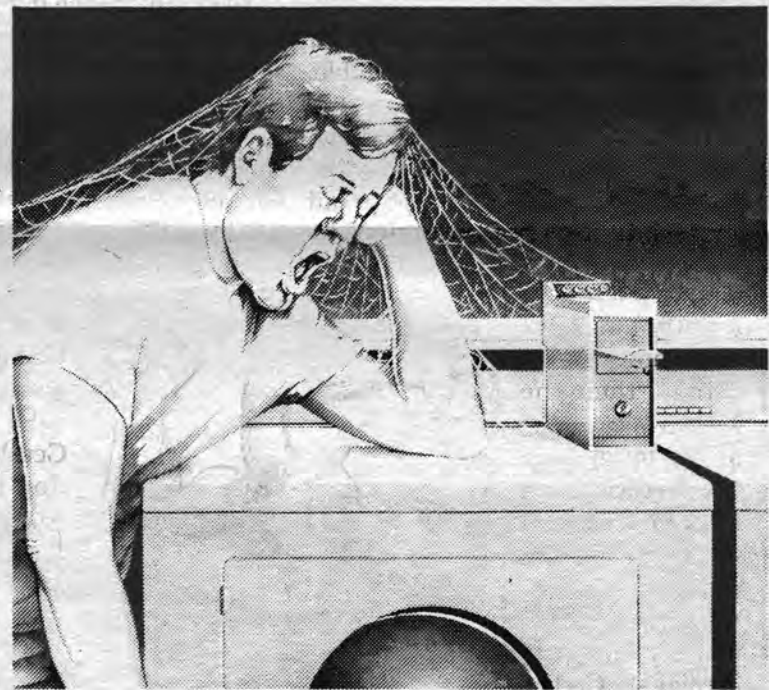

Well, I could go on with these entertaining suggestions all day, but you've got the basic idea. In essence, a snowstorm can be compared to sex—as long as you're prepared, you can stop worrying and enjoy yourself.
