OUTGOING

Perhaps Gimpy's death was prematurely announced. Although I am taking my bows and leaving the Monkey, the torch has been passed, the flame re-kindled and instilled in a glorious new fire, a phoenix of new hope and melodramatic fervor.

In other words, another has been come/ found to continue the crusade of t h e making Knoxville a less obnoxious same place. Ladies and Gents, may I introduce you to Ian Blackburn: a young man who can shape his hair into spires sans mousse and produce non sequiturs on the fly that will make you duck, duck, goose.

Now he's grappling with the production tasks involved in assembling and paying for a 12-page tabloid, but soon I anticipate that the Lame Monkey will continue in a traditionof its own, offering professionally produced alternative reading that is otherwise not available on an Administrationally omnipotent campus.

Big Orange Screw, I challenge you. Don't shrug and just drink another beer. Buy Ian a beer, then set your pens ablaze, pour out your hearts and slurp down the foam in a sea of black printer's ink. The Lame Monkey is a beer for the soul, but we need good hops and barley lest we brew a black label, a darkness of written silence that stainslike the prevading foul poison of initiative and innovation, turning all to a trademarked shade of orange. The Monkey is a voice of dif- stone! It somehow seems appropriate ference, and I hope that it has been that this change should fall on the

At any rate, I hope you find this Monkey enjoyable. I think it's an okay As the Monkey-Come-Lately (ac- issue, considering that it's my first and therefore prone to the biggest screw-ups you can think of. I'd like to thank my invaluable "staff" for their invaluable aid (!), Rand for the production facilities, Missy for turning out a fine cover under a tight deadline, Sherri for putting up with me not coming home for two days during the production of Issue Ten, and everybody who filled out an Instructor Evaluation. Due to deadline requirements, we couldn't get all the evaluations in this issue; as a last-minute note, though, Profs. Evans and Mozingo (Nursing) were spoken highly of, and Profs. Boynton, Davis, and Smith (also Nursing) were, well, not.

Last of all, I want to thank Chris for producing a consistent, quality publication. Knoxville, especially this area, needs more of this sort of thing. Support The Lame Monkey, support Township Jive, start a publication of your own, whatever. Just keep the whole thing rolling. And, as

year), I'd like to say that The Lame Monkey Manifesto is not "against" anything except apathy, and, basically, it's not "for" anything except entertainment, in its own Monkey fashion; if it brings about a change for the better, then so be it. If you disagree with or are annoyed by something you've seen in print, then sit down and write a story, article, Lettuh, comic strip, or whatever in rebuttal. If sitting around bitching did any good, there wouldn't be much point to this paper. If you've read something that you've enjoyed, it wouldn't hurt to sit

by J. Cow Beauregard Lame Monkey Campus Affairs

The thousands of new freshmen who come to UT every fall get only the most basic information - schedule pick-up, registration, where to stand in line next, etc. But students are illinformed about much more information - things the UT Administration would just as soon the average student never learn.

Here are some helpful bits that can make your stay at this Knowledge Factory more enjoyable:

 You can eat in any campus cafeteria with your meal card.

. If you want good seats at the football games, take your I.D. and activities card to the Student Center Ticket Office (1st floor) the Monday morning before Saturday's game.

 If you are male and would like a lot of free beer, visit each fraternity house during Rush week. Pretend to be very interested in pledging machines, a television, and a kitchen;

(joining their fraternity). Also, if you like shallow girls, back-slapping "buddies-for-life", and initiation humiliation in front of thirty guys named "Bud" and "Chip", then you ought to join one of these things.

. If you are a girl and would like free beer, then go to the Strip on weekends. The more trendy bars and nightclubs will offer free drinks for girls in order to get more females in the door, thus attracting guys who pay absurd prices for drinks. If you're a guy and are annoyed at being manipulated like this, then don't patronize these bars.

· There's a sauna for your use (if you can find it - it's tricky) on the second floor of the HPER building (between Humes Hall and the track). · The trolleys that run around the campus are free.

· On the 6th floor of the Undergraduate Library, there is a staff lounge with food and drink the combination to the door is: Press buttons 2 and 4 simultaneously, then button 3. If this doesn't work, knock on the door and someone inside will open it for you. Tell him or her you work in the Reference Department.

· WUTK is the campus radio station found at 90.3 FM on the dial. They play requests. Don't ask for Top 40 songs.

 The old lady with blue hair (swear to God) at the UT Ticket Office & Check Cashing window can be very mean and uncooperative. Avoid her.

· About buying textbooks: At the end of each semester, you can usually sell back your textbooks for about half the price you paid at the bookstore. Occasionally, you will buy a $30-$40 textbook which, at the end of the term, they will not buy back; you'll be stuck with it. Ask before you buy each book whether they'll buy it back later. If not, simply befriend someone in that class.

The Last Few Days of Mad Jack Reese

by Harrison Fowler Lame Monkey Administrative Correspondant

Jack whined, "It ain't over till the fat man sings."

"Phil Scheurer?" "Who?"

"Never mind," I said. "Look Jack, it's not that easy. You've been out of touch for years now. Been buried in the depths of the bureaucracy, you're out of touch. Dazed and confused."

Jack, you know, Jack Reese, he was being fired, after all those years. After the crazy years, the drug riddled mania that was the reign of King Boling the First, it was over. No more drinking champagne from a cheerleader's B-cup, no more Cary Grant smiles at press conferences, no more Gatlinburg ski trips while holding school open during record snow falls. Had to go back to teaching.

We were at the Faculty Club, throwing back a few beers. At least I was. Jack, he was hitting the hard stuff.

"I know I can make it, I can. I've still got the form. A year or two in the English Department, dazzle them with my wit, I can be back in Administration in no time."

As if to prove his point, he stood up, staggered a bit, and showed me his moves. It was true. That man could stand behind a podium better than the tenured wimps half his age.

'Okay, you've got poise, you've got charisma, you've got patches on your elbows. That's just not enough, Jack. Things have changed."

Things had changed, all right. The University of Tennessee was a disease gone into remission. Babyface Lamar, the halfwit bastard of King Ed, had assumed the throne. Aged and withered bureaucrats were dropping like DDT stricken flies, either retiring to Martin in defeat, or forced out of power like Reese. Out with the old, in with the new. And Jack was turning to me for help.

"You can help me. You're an undergraduate, have been for years now. You know what makes this campus tick. Please, I'm begging. Either I start teaching, or they make me assistant to Jerry Askew."

I think this over.

Askew? He's not the worst of the bunch."

"You don't know him. He's a madman. I can't even get him on the phone any more. Humans weren't meant to be Dean of Students for that all night. A little dust around the long. And his hair!" He began nostrils, maybe, but overall, not bad. fiddling nervously with his lucky scarab ring.

Maybe he was right. Lately Askew had been spotted hang gliding over the sunroofs of women's dorms, picking out tanned sorority girls, like a vulture hunting roadkill.

I decided.

"Right. What is it you want then, Jack? What do you want me to do?" "Just show up. I'm teaching my first class in years tomorrow and I'll need a friendly face in the crowd.

Moral support. Someone to ask me a question, so the little scavengers will if that's possible, in my seat. know how smart I am."

"Where, Jack? When?"

"It's this Friday, HSS 121. It's, um... It's a 7:50."

"Jesus. Have they got you teaching freshman composition?'

for me, they can't keep me there. By spring, I'll be in Elizabethan Poetry."

door. If this turned ugly, a fast exit would be necessary.

'Maybe, Jack. I'll see if I can make it." I wasn't promising to be up at 7:50 for anybody. Not even Jack Reese.

His voice trailed after me as I stepped into the afternoon heat.

"You better be there! You owe me! What about 'Nam?"

I wasn't fully aware that I was awake until I actually stumbled into the classroom. Packing the usual equipment for the first day in a new class; shorts, flip-flops, shades, coffee. It was hotter than a Kiss concert in the room. What was I doing here? I mulled that over as the rest of the class began to filter in. Christ on a moped, they look so young! They look like...freshmen?! Now I remember. Mad Jack and his attempt to return to administrative bliss. The quest for bureaucratic power. And I'm here mixed in the middle. It seemed prudent to slip to one of the back seats. Easy enough, the rest of my classmates are filling up the front rows. Virgins. They'll learn.

Jack's entrance caught me checking to make sure the window is open. Just in case. For a change he looked clear-eyed. No blood-shot squints from doing tequila shooters He was dressed to depress, tweeds, leather elbow patches, over what looks suspiciously like a flak-jacket. He walked to the podium and set his briefcase on a nearby desk. What does he have in that thing, I thought.

It bulged in strange ways, rustling as if it held a small wolverine. His eyes immediately found mine, like a doberman finding a fire hydrant.

"Ah, good morning class. It's, ah, good to see so many, ah, reassuring faces here, this morning, in class."

Silence from the kids. I sank lower,

"My name is Jack, ah, Professor Reese, and I'll be your instructor for this quarter. I have a seating chart prepared for us, so if we can find our new seats and we can call roll."

What was with this "we" and "us" bullshit? The kids stood up and shuffled around. Excellent targets should Jack start firing into the crowd.

"Um, excuse me, but I think you're in my seat."

Books and backpack, calculator and comb squinted at me from above.

I grunt, scratched my chest, and drank a sip of coffee. Protective coloration. He moved on. As the furor calmed, Jack-boy started calling roll. He stared down at a computer printout, never looking up to notice one kid answering for three people. He finished and looked up at the class. Looked at me.

"Well, ah, perhaps we should start by going around the class, each student giving his or her name, class and major."

Good, Jack, good idea. That'll warm 'em up. Right. Introductions droned as I considered his start. He was just coasting at the moment. Could he handle it when the class really started? Could he manage the furious pace of non-stop education in freshman comp? Could he lick the seamy underside of a freshmen's... Why is everyone looking at me? Oh. right. My turn.

"Harrison, fifth year student, undecided." The frosty gleam in The Reese-Cup's eyes told me I was less than appreciated. He had me here for moral support and I had better start to produce. I sat and considered my options to the whine of concluding introductions.

Paperwork started filtering around the desks. Syllabi, grading scales, office hours, all on paper the color of Jack's tie.

"Before we get started, are there any questions you would like to ask?"

Shit. This was it. He was staring at me furiously. The time had come to set Jack up with a question that would let him show his stuff. He needed it now. His hands were steady, his hair was smoothly in place, his eyes clear and bright, his age spots covered with Maybelline. If he was ever to impress and intimidate these bovine intellects, now was the time. I raised my hand.

"Yes, you have a question? Please, don't be shy, we're all listening."

A question, then. Jack needed a set so smooth that he couldn't fail to spike right through their egos. A volley that would allow him to dazzle and impress the dullest of wits with his return. A query that would permit Jack Reese, demigod on terra firma, to display his superiority over all mankind.

"Do you consider the implications John Milton made on the purpose and value of evil in Paradise Lost to be found or espoused in Dante Aligheri's Divine Comedy, and if so why?"

His hands started to palsy, his hair slipped slowly out of place, his eyes glazed over, his leg began to tremor and his age spots flushed a bright mauve. I reached for my coffee.

"Well, ah, in response to that, let me just say that, ah, you see that, ah ... Well, what the hell do you want from me, anyway?!??"

He made a dash for his bag and smoke erupted from somewhere. I threw myself to the floor as gunshots ricoched off the cinderblock walls. Jesus, Jack brought a Thompson to class. A small pig scurried past me on the floor as I started to drag myself towards the window. Some kids ran for the door, finding Reese locked it as he came in, some fell to the floor and oray for mercy, others merely sat and asked if this material will be on the

Sparks flew from a hit light fixture

"I wonder how Jack's first day is going?"

and the smoke cleared just enough for me to get a last look a Jack as I made my escape. He sat on the floor, weeping openly, stroking a pig and murmuring in her ear, "Rosebud, rosebud." Out of control. Crash and burn. Just like in Nam.

I dropped out of the window and tried to walk away inconspicuously, drinking what remains of my coffee. Students moved toward the building, smoke belching from the windows, sirens wailing to the rescue. It was over now, I supposed. Jack Reese was a relic of the past, a broken reminder of the era of Maddog Ed and his Bad Boys. I would like to say he was my friend, but you know ... I don't think any of us ever really knew him.

Harrison Fowler is a fifth-year, undecided who swears this will all really happen.

"Not for long, not if you'll do this I started making my way to the

Things That Nobody'll Tell You About Living At UTTM

• When textbook buy-back time rolls around, Vol Textbooks and Rechenbach's Bookstore will claim to give "top dollar". Actually, the UT bookstore usually gives a little more money for your books.

• Don't stay on campus all the time. There are many good shops, stores, restaurants, and nightclubs downtown. Downtown is a short walk from campus; just go east on Cumberland through the World's Fair Site and you're there. Also, for a modest fare, you can catch a K-Trans bus from Cumberland out to west Knoxville; this is where everything is that isn't near campus (shopping, theaters, grocery stores, etc.).

• Throughout the year, several concerts and festivals are held on the World's Fair Site, many of which are free. They are hardly ever publicized, so you have to watch for them. In addition, there is an art museum on the World's Fair Site, which is open during normal business hours. You can also ride to the top of the Sunsphere (the monument that resembles a joystick) for a $1 donation. You can see for many miles and is a pleasant experience when stoned.

• Don't do your banking at First Tennessee. They will screw you over at every available opportunity. Although it is the only bank on the Strip, there are good banks downtown, like First American and Tennessee National Bank. There is also a good bank (Valley Bank) in Fort Sanders on 17th.

• The student paper at UT is The Daily Beacon. Forget about the Want Ads if you seek a job - there is a much bigger catalog of jobs at the Financial Aid office (room 115 of the Student Services Building). To comply with the Equal Opportunities Act, The Daily Beacon hires mongoloids and retarded citizens to draw some of the comic strips. Please don't become angry if the comics seem pointless and unfunny. If possible, find someone who saved every Stoner's Aquarium strip (by Ron Ruelle) for the past couple of years.

• Although UT is a pretty nice place to study, being here for four or more years can get a little tedious. A great opportunity is to go abroad for your junior year. There is much information at the Center for International Education (3rd floor of Alumni Hall). Many of the programs cost about the same as a year as UT, and you can go to almost any country in the world.

• If you need cash badly, try selling your football ticket on the morning before the game. Depending on the opponents and the Vols' season record, you can get anywhere from $3-$20, depending on how drunk or stupid or both the buyer is. • If you're going to try to use someone else's calling card number (six digits), make calls from a dorm lobby phone or elsewhere - not on your own. They can trace the calls and you get a big fine & visit to your friendly, constipated Dean. Of course, the administration will not tell you this.

• If the administration screws you over, return the favor in a subtle, anonymous way. Why? Because they are bloated and can cause you as much trouble as they want. You shouldn't view the administration as enemies who are out to get you, but rather as conservative, analcompulsive turds who'll occasionally step on your toes.
